

General Tells Editors U.S. Unduly Excited Over Berlin

WEST BERLIN — (Delayed)—Major General Albert Watson, hard-bitten but soft-spoken commander of United States military forces in Berlin, today triggered a short but fast verbal barrage at the American press for its sensationalism over the Berlin situation.

"Reporting of what's going on here has been more emotional than rational and the result has been that the American people have been unduly excited about every little incident that might occur, whether there's any real significance to it or not," General Watson said.

"I think it's time we quit going into a panic every time one of the Communists in East Berlin tries his hand at harassment. This United States is the biggest and most powerful country in the world. Whatever these incidents in Berlin, nobody is going to kick us around," he continued.

He didn't say it, but the shoot-from-the-hip commander implied that the press is greatly responsible for unnecessary emotionalism and concern among the American people about the Berlin situation.

The general's succinct and justifiable observations came in response to a question from one of a group of American newspaper editors with him he conferred at the U. S. Military Headquarters.

His was an attitude of judgment rather than hostility and he made this quite clear. He emphasized:

"I'd like to spread the impression all over America that we here in Berlin are not excited. And nobody in this outfit is afraid. We think we know what's going on and we know that the Russians, despite a lot of their troublesome tactics, aren't going to start something they realize they can't finish. And if you don't believe we are not excited walk around the compound and talk to our men and their wives and their families."

I was willing to take the general's word for it. After an hour or so of some sharp but friendly repartee between him and his newspaper visitors, I can easily see why he's in command of our American forces in one of the most delicate spots in the world.

General Watson didn't try to minimize the importance of the Berlin issue.

On the other hand he was frank with this observation:

"If there is to be a war anywhere, I firmly believe it will not be precipitated by Berlin. In the first place, the Kremlin can't afford it and in the second place the Kremlin knows that the United States is too powerful."

Why didn't the United States Command as part of the Allied Control Authority of Berlin step in and do something about the "Wall of Shame," as it is known in West Berlin, when the Communists started building it last August?

Here's how the general explained it:

"In the beginning, it didn't appear to be a wall at all. Some barbed wire was thrown up at some points and border guards were increased. But officials of the East German Republic gave the impression that they were simply tightening up controls on the increasing flow of refugees from the East to the West to prevent what was becoming a critical loss of manpower."

"As it turned out, the 100 free entrances between West Berlin and East Berlin were reduced to seven and the "wall" appeared, although even now this wall as such extends only eight miles, with the rest of the 29-mile boundary is closed mostly by barbed wire and guard stations."

"But here is something you must remember. Every inch of that wall is in East Berlin. Now, had we protested with military

Local Couple Detained In E. Germany

A Levittown man and his wife spent 336 hours or two-weeks vacation in Europe recently, but 15 minutes of that time will be long remembered.

It seems Robert F. Gilmore, 2 Wild Rose Lane, Willowood, Levittown, and his wife, Jean Audrey, found themselves on the wrong train while passing through Germany, and were "detained" in East Germany for 15 shady minutes.

Wrong Train

Gilmore said that he and his wife traveling from Amsterdam to Berlin, West Berlin, that is, and somehow they managed to board the wrong train, and wound up in East Germany.

Good Evening!

B.W. Baiting for G.G.G.

Sun breaks through for a fair weekend.

And right on schedule. No matter what the calendar says this weekend officially marks the beginning of summer.

Lower Bucks schools end classes and youngsters rarin' to go for a big summer with bicycles shined, pools opening today and baseball under way.

Tragedy already with death of Little Leaguer Albert Ameible.

We can't be too careful during during these summer months. With youngsters speeding up activities, it would be a good time for adult drivers to slow down.

So, who is worrying about debts?

Financial wizard (?) and farm magnate Billie Sol Estes $18,000,000 in hock. Lawyers meeting to work out an acceptable plan to prevent action on creditors' petition to declare Estes an involuntary bankrupt. Guess they're trying to figure out the monthly payments.

Algeria problem far from solved for French President Charles de Gaulle.

OAS forces bomb Algiers city hall last night and fires still burning today. Fires burning all over. It seems. French security guards smash one assassination attempt against French president and force of 5,000 needed to guard de Gaulle on his "Meet the people" tour.

How about those Phillies?

They scored 10 runs in the third inning last night, their most since 1949. "Sluggers" Roy Sievers is only hitting .199, but his grand slammer in the big inning gave him and the club a big lift.

This is the toughest day of the year for the touring pro golfers. The U.S. Open at Oakmont winds up with 18 holes this morning and the final 18 this afternoon.

Bob Rosburg, author of the golf series, "Tee Time," which appeared recently in the Courier-Times, is tied at the halfway point with the favorite Arnold Palmer. The latter's stamina may be the deciding factor later this afternoon.

Don't get all steamed up about the heat this summer. It only makes you hotter.

Some day a groom is going to show up at his wedding in dungarees just so somebody will notice him.

During summer all the little kids love to play in your yard. It won't be lawn now.

Go to church tomorrow.

Dancer Testifies

Anita Lopushok, a Chicago belly dancer with a ballerina background, awaits her turn to testify before the Senate Rackets subcommittee yesterday. Domestic Supply Low

Racketeers Import Foreign B-Girls

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Senate investigator said today that the domestic supply of B-girls and strip teasers is running so low that racketeers are importing foreign talent.

Jerome S. Adlerman, chief counsel of the Senate rackets subcommittee, said the panel would explore the immigration of combination B-girl-strippers when hearings resume Tuesday.

Most of the foreign ladies, it was indicated, are coming from Canada to replace the short supply of home-grown exotics.

The subcommittee is looking into charges of collusion between vice syndicates and certain officials of the American Guild of Variety Artists (AGVA-CIO).

The union's Midwest regional director, Martin Cavanaugh, testified Friday he did not know anything about reports that girls with "specialized talent" were being recruited in Canada.

Guerrilla Ambush

Two U.S. Officers Killed In Viet Nam

SAIGON, Viet Nam (UPI) — Two U.S. Army officers were killed today when Communist Viet Cong guerrillas ambushed a military convoy, a U.S. military spokesman announced.

The spokesman said the Communists attacked the convoy along a road near the town of Ben Cat, about 25 miles north of Saigon.

The Americans were not immediately identified. They are part of the special force in South Viet Nam to train the Vietnamese forces for their struggle against the Communist guerrillas.

Two days ago U.S. military sources reported that one American military man was killed and two others were wounded by Viet Cong guerrillas in a clash near the Laotian border 375 miles north of Saigon.

Earlier today Gen. George H. Decker, U.S. Army chief of staff, pledged that the United States would support south Viet Nam with "whatever means are necessary to achieve final success" in the struggle against Communist guerrillas.

But he warned that the fight against Viet Cong forces still was "in what might be called the development stage" and no immediate spectacular results could be expected.

Decker told a news conference that by next summer the training program of the U.S. military assistance command would make it possible for the South Vietnamese to throw at least two new divisions of regular troops into the fight against the Viet Cong.

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) — John H. Hill played penny ante with police and lost.

Hill mailed 99 pennies to police for a $1 parking fine and later was served with a warrant because there were no stamps on the envelope.

Total additional cost to the youth was $8.56, including court costs, a $1.01 fine because the ticket was more than five days old and 55 cents in postage.

Weather

Sunny and warm today, high 85 to 90. Clear tonight, low in the 60's. Mostly sunny and hot tomorrow, high 90 to 95.

NEWTOWN 'CYCLIST,' 28, DIES AFTER CRASH

Ex-Officials Are Called In Estes Probe

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House investigators plan to call former Agriculture Department officials from two administrations for questioning about their connections with Billie Sol Estes.

House intergovernmental relations subcommittee Chairman L. H. Fountain said he would probably resume the Estes hearing Tuesday or Wednesday.

The North Carolina Democrat indicated that the subcommittee expected to quiz these three witnesses:

— James A. McConnell, who was an assistant secretary of agriculture and consultant to Secretary Ezra Taft Benson. McConnell is now connected with the Commercial Solvents Corp., which gave Estes more than $5 million credit.

— Walter C. Berger, another administrator of the Stabilization and Conservation Service in the Eisenhower administration and now on Commercial Solvents' board of governors.

— William Morris, a special assistant to a top Democratic Agriculture Department official, who was fired after he refused to answer to questions about his connection with the Texas financier. His former boss, James T. Ralph, was also fired for making telephone calls on a credit card which belonged to Estes.

Bass Indicates Collusion

Rep. Ross Bass, D-Tenn., charged at Friday's hearings that Estes made an "iron clad commitment" to owe his government grain storage fees to Commercial Solvents five days before he got the storage contract.

Bass, a member of the subcommittee, said this indicated the firm had inside information that the department was going to give Estes the contract.

Estes assigned his future grain storage fees to the company in return for a $900,000 loan to get the business started and pay other expenses.

Wheeler Denies Allegation

Maynard C. Wheeler, president of Commercial Solvents, denied Bass' charge that Estes, Commercial Solvents and the Agriculture Department were in "collusion."

He specifically denied that the agreement to take over Estes' Continued on Page 3, Col. 6)

In Fairless Hills

Minister Of St. Paul's Transfers To Ephrata

The Rev. Virgil G. Megill, Jr., pastor of St. Paul's Evangelical United Brethren Church, Fairless Hills, has been assigned as pastor of Hope Church, Ephrata.

The Rev. Wilbert H. Wolf, r., pastor of St. John's Church, Pawtucket, R. I., was assigned to St. Paul's Church in Fairless Hills. Both pastors will assume their new responsibilities July 1. The assignments were made by Bishop Hermann W. Kaebnick.

Pastor Megill will speak tomorrow on Trinity Sunday on "Why the Trinity," at 11 a.m., and "Witness of God's Work," at 7:30 p.m. His last Sunday services will be June 24, when the sermon topics will be "Why the Church," at the morning worship service, and "Repentance" at the Evening Worship service.

Farewell Luncheon

St. Paul's Church is planning a farewell luncheon for Pastor Megill, Sunday, June 24.

In May, 1958 Pastor and Mrs. Megill moved into a Fairless Hills home at 169 Wistar Road. A new parsonage was constructed on the five-acre church site at 501 Wistar Road and dedicated March 1, 1959. The same day was Charter Sunday, when the St. Paul's Continued on Page 3, Col. 3)

Fires Still Burning OAS Bomb Wrecks Algiers City Hall, Crews Seek Victims

ALGERS (UPI) — Salvage crews searched the debris of city hall today for the bodies of victims of the Secret Army Organization (OAS) bomb that shattered part of the heavily guarded building Friday night.

Early today, fires were still burning in several parts of the building despite night-long efforts by firemen to quench the flames.

At least one French soldier was killed and 43 were wounded in the bombing, most severe so far in the OAS "scorched earth" campaign to destroy French improvements in Algeria. Several other bodies were believed buried in the rubble.

In other actions Friday, the OAS bombed two hospitals here, ambushed a police riot squad outside Oran and attacked two Algiers police posts. Ten men were wounded in the Oran attack.

OAS dynamiters ordered the hospitals cleared of patients and employees before setting off their bombs, and no casualties were reported in those attacks.

A "pirate broadcast" Friday night said the OAS has issued orders for "the destruction of Algeria's economic potential" before President Charles de Gaulle gives the country back to the Arabs.

The Arab provisional government announced Friday night that seven parties, including the Communists, have been authorized to take part in the campaign for the July 1 independence referendum.

Delinquent Problem

Tax List Excites Bensalem Residents

By PAUL ALTAIRE
Courier-Times Staff Writer

The Bensalem tax collector's office has been deluged with numerous calls from irate citizens whose names appear on a list with some 2,000 others who have never paid head tax in the township.

A large number of the names on the list are those of persons who have not lived in the township for years; others who have businesses in the township but who do not live there. One name which appears on the list is that of a woman who has not lived in the township since as far back as 1929.

But most of the names are of persons who have never even been on the tax list although they live in the township.

Collector Criticized

The callers, for the most part, have criticized tax collector Marie Reece for placing their names on the list. The protestors, however, are not only those persons who are not required to pay the tax but also those who are legally responsible for doing so, she said.

Mrs. Reece said that many of the callers told her they elected her and now that she is in office she has added their names to the list.

Mrs. Reece said that the list was not prepared by her nor was it prepared since she has taken office.

Rear Tire Blows

A 28-year-old Newtown man was fatally injured last night when a motorcycle he was driving blew a tire and struck a culvert at Stoopville and Bollington Roads, Route 413, near Wrightstown.

Charles R. Thompson, Route 1, Newtown, died at Bucks County Hospital at 1:05 a.m. today of multiple internal injuries. He was admitted at 11:30 p.m.

Critical Condition

A brother, Robert E., 24, the driver of the cycle, suffered a possible concussion and was listed in "critical" condition at the hospital.

The body was removed today to the Stacy-Brown Funeral Home at Newtown.

Patrolman Russell C. Reed of Wrightstown Township police investigated the mishap. He reported that the pair was headed toward Wrightstown about 10:30 p.m., when the tire blew out and the cycle was thrown out of control.

The vehicle then swerved wildly off the road and struck a culvert, throwing Charles off the cycle. The cycle traveled for some 135 feet, after striking the culvert, throwing Robert off and finally coming to a stop.

The pair was taken to the hospital by the Newtown American Legion ambulance.

Two Committed To Bucks Prison

A scientist and a man who pleaded "not guilty" were committed to the Bucks County Prison in Doylestown yesterday on charges of drunken driving.

James Magee, 34, 1012 Fitch Road, Southampton, the scientist, and Norbert Walker Jr., 28, 6928 Ardleigh St., Philadelphia, were found guilty on the charges in hearings before Warmister Justice of the Peace Fred L. Bickel.

It was reported that Walker kept repeating "I didn't do anything" all the way to the prison.

General Tells Editors U.S. Unduly Excited

Two Crashes Are Reported

action, would this have been interpreted as an invasion of territory behind the Iron Curtain? "I've never had a Monday morning quarterback call the signals on this one.

"I had to remember something else. I knew that three well-equipped Russian groups had ringed West Berlin and I didn't know whether they were looking in or looking out. All I had was 27 tanks and two spares."

The Allies presently have 11,000 troops in West Berlin — 6,000 American, 3,000 British and 1,500 French. Last summer the number was considerably less.

East German military force amounts to 60,000 personnel — 10,000 East German troops, 14,000 East German police and 45,000 Soviet troops sitting only a few miles from East Berlin.

But the American and Allied Forces are superbly equipped and superbly trained and ready at all times for any eventuality. General Watson expressed tremendous pride in his brigade as did Col. Thomas C. Foote, chief of staff, and Col. Lawrence Vogel, brigade commander.

Col. Vogel believed that the U.S. troops in Berlin are the finest and best-behaved of any stationed anywhere in the world.

"They have to be," he said. "Otherwise, the slightest little indiscretion is grabbed by the Communies in East Berlin and spread all over East Germany as an example of how the 'American pigs' are destroying West Berlin and West Germany."

General Watson's job is a two-fold one. He represents both the Defense Department and the State Department in this city whose military defense as well as its government is officially administered by the Allied Control Authority which theoretically controls the whole of Berlin.

But with the Kremlin representative taking a walk from councils of the Authority two years ago when his ears were trimmed over a question of access to West Berlin, the Authority confines its attention for the most part to this side of the city.

Other than defense per se, one of the vital problems with which the American, British and French missions are always confronted is that of free access to the city through East Germany. This access is absolutely essential to the city's survival.

After the two hour conference today with a group of able, dedicated and determined American military leaders, I haven't the slightest idea that free access — meaning the three air corridors and the autobahn — will not be maintained, at whatever cost.

The American mission also has the task of keeping morale of West Berliners high, of demonstrating from time to time U.S. might, of cooperating with city civil functions.

I asked General Watson about the future of West Berlin, its viability, its growth.

"I think it may be a long time before Berlin crisis is resolved," he said. "But there will always be a West Berlin. What we need here is population growth. The city now has about 2,250,000 people. But the birth rate is low and, of course, not too many people are moving here.

"The people of West Berlin have confidence in the future. But we might as well face it. This confidence is now and will continue to be directly related to the confidence they have in the United States of America. As this confidence continues, West Berlin will become even a more beautiful and a more dynamic city that it is now."

General Watson's job is a two-fold one. He represents both the Defense Department and the State Department in this city whose military defense as well as its government is officially administered by the Allied Control Au-

Final Time For Walkout Is Postponed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Administration officials were reported more optimistic today about the chances of a strike-free settlement of the airlines dispute.

The hopes were engendered by the hesitancy of the Flight Engineers International Association (FEIA) to set a definite strike time in its dispute with Eastern Air Lines, Pan American World Airways and Trans World Airlines.

The flight engineers Friday rejected President Kennedy's appeal to submit the contract dispute to binding arbitration.

Postpone Walkout

But they postponed their threatened strike of 1,700 engineers for at least 24 hours to let the airlines weigh a counter offer, which company spokesmen said was merely a rehash of one discussed before.

Union spokesmen said there would be no strike before this afternoon at the earliest.

In its seven page statement Friday, the union agreed to submit economic questions to arbitration but would not allow an impartial board to rule on the key issue — the makeup of jetliner crews.

The engineers, however, proposed this formula only for Eastern and Pan American. They said Trans World engineers did not want an arbitrator to decide any part of the dispute, which would ground 40 per cent of U.S. air traffic.

Airlines Reject Proposal

Pan American and Eastern promptly turned down the proposal, saying it was one that labor secretary Arthur J. Goldberg rejected Thursday because it did not meet Kennedy's recommendation.

Pan American and Eastern reiterated their proposal to turn the entire dispute over to arbitration.

The union statement also said Kennedy had misled the public when he claimed the engineers had rejected a White House commission recommendation that jet crews be reduced from four to three men with flight engineers getting some pilot training.

It said the union had always backed elimination of the "completely useless third pilot" and said the engineers would accept pilot training.

while she did not prepare the list, she would exercise her duty to collect the head tax.

"I don't make up the laws," she said, "my job is to administer such laws as relate to taxes. That is what I was placed in office to do and which I plan to do."

Mrs. Reece said that she did not campaign under the promise that some persons would be exempted—or continue to be exempted—from paying taxes.

"As tax collector of Bensalem," she said, "I plan to carry on the duties which were entrusted to me."

She said if any persons are qualified to be exempted from paying the taxes, "this would not be a matter for me to decide."

Funeral Rites Monday For LL Player

Funeral services for a nine-year-old Levittown boy, who died after suffering injuries in a Little League baseball game, will be held Monday.

A Solemn Requiem Mass will be celebrated at 10 a.m. at the Queen of the Universe Catholic Church for Albert Ameible, son of Albert and Laura Ameible, 30 Cotton Road, Cobalt Ridge, Levittown. Interment will follow at Resurrection Cemetery, Bensalem.

Survivors

Besides the parents, survivors include a brother, Richard, eight; two sisters, Mrs. Louis Steinhauer, Mount Holly, and Virginia, 13, and grandparents.

Albert suffered head injuries last Friday, while playing with the Jewish War Veterans, Post 696, team in a game at the Walter Miller School field. He collided with another player who was chasing a fly ball.

Taken to Delaware Valley Hospital, Bristol Borough, immediately after the accident, Albert was given preliminary treatment and transferred to Children's Hospital in Philadelphia.

Immediate Surgery

He underwent immediate surgery, but died at 8:45 p.m. Thursday from brain hemorrhages.

A coroner's inquest was ordered yesterday to determine whether a ball or the collision caused the head injury which killed the youth.

Bucks Democrats Start Unity Move

In the wake of John T. Welsh's victory over John C. Mulligan for the county chairmanship of the Democratic party, key party figures are closing party ranks for the November election.

Congressional Candidate James A. Michener issued a statement today indicating his wholehearted support of a move for unity.

Michener's campaign manager, Milton Berkes, who helped defeat Welsh when the new chairman ran for county commissioner in 1959, said he intended to work with Welsh "if he'll let me."

In the 1959 election, Welsh was tail-end with Falls Township Democrats among four candidates running for the commissioner's post. Berkes was, and still is, a Falls supervisor and, along with David Struble, township tax collector, was probably most instrumental in Welsh's defeat in heavily Democratic Falls.

Mulligan stated right after his defeat in Monday night's voting that his followers should "be the great Democrats you are and go down the organization line 100 per cent."

Mulligan was defeated in committee people's voting by 179 to 159 votes.

Michener's statement was as follows:

"Both John Welsh and John Mulligan are two strong, fine contenders who battled vigorously for control of a vital party. The election was conducted with scrupulous honesty which is a credit to John Mulligan.

"Great Interest

"The great interest in this election was demonstrated by the fact that only two out of 340 committee people were absent. John Welsh's victory was clear and undisputable.

"I have said previously that I would support the winner. I reiterate this stand now. I confidently expect the new county chairman to lead our party to victory in November.

"This confidence is bolstered by the many offers of full support that have come to me from leaders of both groups.

"Our party vitally needs the leaders of the lower end, where the largest concentration of voters is. We also vitally need the leaders and the workers of the middle and upper districts where we have a golden opportunity to break into the traditional Republican vote.

"With both groups working toward unity, our chances for victory are enormously better."

Blood-Soaked Garb Key In Murder Case

TOMS RIVER, N.J. (UPI) — Police knew today that somewhere they might find the blood-soaked car or a blood-soaked garment belonging to the person who met Phyllis Ann Jones on the beach and killed her.

It was one, slim lead in a week of frustrated investigation into the sudden murder of the Norristown, Pa., acting student. The walk she took down Long Beach Island last Saturday was her last. She was never seen alive again by anyone but her killer.

Ocean County Prosecutor William Huber said that a still-incomplete autopsy report showed the girl had lost a great deal of blood.

Blood found at the site where her bathing-suit clad body was discovered "was not sufficient to explain the total loss of blood," he said.

Police now reason that the 24-year-old red-haired girl was still gasping and fighting for life after she was taken to a deserted, putrid deer burial ground some 21 miles inland from Long Beach Island.

State Police Lt. William Kennedy said the girl showed signs of struggling as she lay on a pine-needle carpet near the burial pit.

Grasped Pine Needles

"One hand was holding pine needles and the soles of her feet were dirty indicating she had pushed her feet" in a final, desperate struggle to live, he said.

She bled from the nose and Huber said the bleeding might have originated from a throat hemorrhage.

Kennedy said he believed Miss Jones had first been choked, then finished off when her assailant pressed her head into the pine needles, pressing the last bit of air and life out of her.

Her body, lying stomach down and with her hands tied behind her back with the straps of her green bathing suit, was found Sunday night by a game warden and his family.

They had come to the deserted pit to find a set of antlers, for friends.

Miss Jones was last seen alive about 9:30 a.m. Saturday when she told her companion and tutor, Hedgerow Theater dramatics coach Miss Rose Schulman, 52, of Media, Pa., that she meant to walk down the long, deserted beach alone.

She left Miss Schulman on a blanket at Barnegat Light. She wore only her bathing suit and took only her sunglasses.

Sunglasses Near Body

The sunglasses, without distinguishable fingerprints, were found a few feet from her body.

"We have no defendant. The case has not been solved," Huber said.

The time of death has not been narrowed beyond a 36 hour period, he said.

Police said they had no description of the killer and could not say whether Miss Jones knew her assailant and whether she went with him willingly to the burial pit.

The burial pit, reached by a narrow gravel road and hidden back in scrub pines, is sometimes used as a lover's lane.

But investigators from the Ocean County Police and the state police have not ruled out the possibility that the killer stumbled upon the pit by chance.

Still unexplained is why he failed to dump the girl's body into one of the pits holding decaying deer carcasses. The lime there would have more quickly disposed of her body.

Residents Become Wary

BARNEGAT LIGHT, N.J. (UPI) — The beach is too broad and the sunshine is too inviting to let the murder of Phyllis Jones change this town outwardly.

But beneath an air of early summer tranquility, its residents are concerned.

"It's getting so that you don't want to go out at night," said one waitress who works at Andy's Restaurant. It is the last place Miss Jones went before heading for the beach.

"I wish it were over. People are beginning to imagine things. One man thinks he heard a scream that day.

A red-haired waitress bustled from the coffee machine to the counter and said she wouldn't talk.

"I just don't want to get involved in this," she said. "All I get is people who buy a cup of coffee and ask questions."

Throughout the week, there were more detectives walking the beach than sunbathers.

They stopped each lonely fisherman and brown woman. They came with binoculars, leading to rumors of a peeping tom.

But they found nothing on the wide beach which runs into the sea in a ruffle of surf.

People who don't know about the murder find out quickly enough.

They overhear the continual murmur of conversation or one of the detectives tells them.

One tanned woman from Trenton learned from a detective she was sitting within yards of the spot where Miss Jones had last been seen.

She didn't move; she was painting the lighthouse Barnegat Light is named for.

But she said she didn't feel at ease anymore.

Anne O'Connor, a Chicago comedienne who has been feuding with the union's leadership, said the demand for exotic dancers seems inexhaustible in the Chicago area.

Thousands of exotics have flocked into the union, Miss O'Connor said, and booking agents scramble to sign on more.

Previous witnesses have said that nearly all exotics take off some clothes on stage and afterward must mix with men to cage drinks.

Attracts Crowds

Richard Deissler, president of the Levittown Businessmen's Association and manager of Sears, Roebuck and Company has set aside Fathers' Day as the day in which all fathers will be admitted free to the "Man In Space Show" which will be operating from 1 p.m. to 6 p.m. tomorrow accompanied by children.

"The Man In Space Show," whose Levittown appearance is its fifth engagement, has shattered all previous opening attendance records.

"Man In Space" was produced in cooperation with NASA and was originally booked to augment the

The Levittown man said that the boarder police were "very courteous," but we were "very nervous."

Gilmore said that the police asked him why he was carrying a camera and if he had planned to take pictures. He offered the police both the film and camera and this gesture seemed to pacify the officers, and the couple was allowed to continue on.

How did Gilmore find East Berlin? "East Berlin was very drab and unfriendly looking, like just after the war, while West Berlin was warm and friendly, almost like Broadway in New York."

The United States Air Force is represented with a two-man Gemini Capsule and Thiokol has erected a Sergeant Rocket on the Mall.

In the "Man In Space Show" are such exhibits as a full size lunar space ship, cut aways of America's family of rockets and a mooncape showing how men will live on the moon and the type of installations that will be erected on the moon. The climax is a thrilling seven minute colored film of Astronaut John Glenn. This is presented on the divided screen with a commentary by Lowell Thomas.

The United States Navy has also joined the project and is displaying two interesting mannequins complete in Navy space suits with helmets and all official equipment.
